

What a Waste

A Life of Significance

Many people allow life to happen “to” them. Instead of embracing life and living a life of significance, people choose to live as if life does not have any meaning. But you were made to be significant...your life was created on purpose and for a purpose. It is time to live on purpose. Reject passivity, embrace responsibility, and pursue to God-given purpose planted in your heart.

Discussion Questions

1. What did you want to be when you were growing up? Do you know where that desire came from? What changed (or do you still want to be that thing) Discuss.
 2. Many people live as passive observers of their own lives. Have you ever found yourself living in this way; going from “thing to thing” simply because it was easier than making a decision of your own? Please describe.
 3. Few people have a clear sense of the kind of person that they want to become. Not even do they pay little attention to God’s vision for their life, they don’t even have a “me-sized” vision. Do you have a vision for your life? The kind of person you want to become? Why or why not? Discuss.
 4. Are you more inclined to allowing passivity or control to dominate your behavior? Have you ever noticed that in yourself before? Please share your ideas.
 5. In order to live a life of significance/meaning a person has to decide. They have to decide to reject passivity, embrace responsibility, and pursue the vision God has placed in their heart. Are you willing to do this? What is one practical step towards this that you could take today?
-

God in Real Life

1. This week, reject the daily temptations to passivity and embrace the ordinary opportunities for responsibility.
-

To the Heart

“Train up a child in the way he should go; even when he is old he will not depart from it.”
~Proverbs 22:6