

Insecure

Not Home

In a time of incredible insecurity, we trust in incomprehensible mercy.

Discussion Questions

1. Even though this is a time of “stay at home”, many of us can feel even more in exile, insecure, and “not home” these days. What has been the most challenging part of staying home these days?
 2. Our security can often be tied up in outcomes. Have you found that there are times when your security/happiness/peace is conditional? Have there been times when it isn't? Please share.
 3. Saint Peter says that, since we live “not home” as Christians, we must live reverently (or “not carelessly”). What is one way that you know you are called to live more intentionally or thoughtfully?
 4. Christian hope isn't optimism, it is trust in Another extended into the future. Is your hope connected with the Person of Jesus or do you place your trust in something else? What is that?
 5. Jesus opened the Scriptures so they would know where He has been and realize where He IS. Based on where God has been in your life in the past, where is He now in the present? Based on who He has been, who do you know Him to be now?
 6. The day will come when we will no longer hold onto hope because we will hold onto Him. Do you think about that day? Do you pray for it? Why or why not?

God in Real Life

This week, do everything with the knowledge that He is faithful. Trust Him with your present and your future.

To the Heart

"For David says of him: 'I saw the Lord ever before me, with him at my right hand I shall not be disturbed.'" Acts 2:25
