Unfinished

Jesus accomplished the Father's will in His passion, death, and resurrection. His mission of salvation is "Finished". And yet, Christ's Body on earth still lives out the mission of Her Head: we are called to unite our sufferings to His for the salvation of the world. And this work — the work He has entrusted to us — remains unfinished.

Discussion Questions

1. What do you anticipate missing the most heading into this "strange" Holy Week? How will you try and make this time more "Holy Week-ish"?
  2. In all of His suffering throughout the Passion Jesus is saying, "Father, this is for her." "Father, this is for him." You are one of His intentions. Does that resonate with you in a personal way? How so?
  3. Jesus finished the work of Salvation. And yet, what is unfinished? Jesus left room in it so that you could participate. What does that tell you about Him?
  4. For the Christian, there is only wasted suffering or redemptive suffering. Did you realize that your suffering can be redemptive? How does that change your perspective of it?
  5. Do you have any examples of when you have offered up your own sufferings for others? Did it bring you closer to Jesus? How so?

God in Real Life

This week, as He gives you that particle of His Cross in your day-to-day sufferings, what He is saying is, "I trust you with this. Use this." Unite that particle with His Cross in prayer: "Jesus, I trust You with this. Use this for {your intentions here}."

To the Heart

They spat upon him and took the reed and kept striking him on the head. And when they had mocked him, they stripped him of the cloak, dressed him in his own clothes, and led him off to crucify him. As they were going out, they met a Cyrenian named Simon; this man they pressed into service to carry his cross.
